Cella Or The Survivors

The podium is rectangular, aligned North-South. The main chamber of the temple, the Cella, was positioned at the back of the podium, and would have been a 285sq metre rectangular room (its length based on the position of the podium's vaults, would have been one and a quarter its width, in keeping with Vitruvian design) and was also aligned North-South, with a Southern entrance.

A caesareum was a temple devoted to the Imperial cult. Caesarea were located throughout the Roman Empire, and often funded by the imperial government, tending to replace state spending on new temples to other gods, and becoming the main or only large temple in new Roman towns in the provinces. This was the case at Évora, Vienne and Nîmes, which were all expanded by the Romans as coloniae from ...
