Hmmm, this is a good question, Michelle! Must is a much more definite modal verb than the others. It is a helping verb that adds the meaning that something is required or necessary, that something is likely, or that someone should do something. It doesn't fit in this conditional sentence. This is an unreal conditional, meaning you are imagining that a past situation was different.

Electric power transmission is the bulk movement of electrical energy from a generating site, such as a power plant, to an electrical substation. The interconnected lines which facilitate this movement are known as a transmission network. This is distinct from the local wiring between high-voltage substations and customers, which is typically referred to as electric power distribution.
