Words That You Should Know

There is a crisis of insults on the Web. On one hand, the volume of flames is very high yet the quality is poor. Gone are the days of the razor-sharp wit of Oscar Wilde and Winston Churchill*, only to be replaced by a string of four letter words typed in ALL CAPS by n00bs (the latest of which is "FAIL”, itself a failure of coming up with a more scathing insult, if you think about it ...

Bawl . Have you ever thought that when a person bawls, it sounds like a barking dog? If so, you're on to the Latin origins of this word. In Latin, baulare meant "to bark like a dog," and when the word was first adopted into English, it was only used in reference to man's best friend. But, because distressed human beings can sound so much like dogs when they gulp for air and woof sobs of ...
